RESPOND

IMMEDIATE SUPPORT

Islamic Relief aims to be among the first on the ground when an emergency strikes, helping those affected immediately. We provide vulnerable families with life-saving aid when floods, droughts or earthquakes happen.

Over the past 25 years, our teams have responded to emergencies across all provinces of Pakistan. We always aim to reach as many people as we can including those in remote regions and isolated communities.

BUILDING BACK BETTER

We not only save lives, we also help rebuild them – we stay even after the situation has calmed, helping families restore their lives. We do this through developing the local infrastructure; such as roads, bridges, health centres and schools; providing shelter, access to clean water and helping people to earn a living.

We try to ensure our development work strengthens communities so they no longer need external help.

REDUCING FUTURE RISKS

We don't even stop there – where people are affected by the same disasters repeatedly, we work towards reducing the potential risk of a disaster. Working closely with local communities, we have developed early warning systems and provided essential training and equipment. This ensures these communities are better prepared and more able to cope with future emergencies.

Since 1992 Islamic Relief Pakistan has been amongst the first organisations to respond to emergencies in the country.
